Proposed title of the session

Monetary Systems in Post-colonial transition in Asia and Africa

Abstract

The aim of this proposed session is to explore the evolution of the colonial monetary systems during the process of independence of the former colonies. The objective is to shed light on the different historical cross-experiences such as a comparative analysis of the British and the French cases as well as the Dutch and the Portuguese cases of monetary post-colonial transitions in the Twentieth century.

The framework of the conference consists of three main points:

- (1) - Have different historical patterns of monetary decolonization co-existed? What are the specifics of the British, French, Dutch and Portuguese colonization from the monetary point of view? This point could be understood, and partly renewed through an appropriated adaptation of the famous Mundell-Fleming trilemma to the different post-colonial monetary zones.
  - (2) – How did the monetary transition remodeled the domestic financial system in the new independent states? How has (or not) the banking relations adapted between the former metropolises and their colonial territories? This point also leads to the consideration of the impact of the monetary post-colonial transition on the evolution of external trades as well as international investments in the former colonial economies.
  - (3) – To what extent could the modalities of the monetary and financial transition from colonial to post-colonial periods be related to the history of the « emergence » (more or less effective) of the former colonial territories?
